

What is 'Final Girl' and how does it work?

Final Girl is a solo board game where you play the heroine of a classic horror movie. To defeat the killer, you must manage action points, rescue victims, and gather vital items under constant pressure.

Components

To play Final Girl, you need both a Core Box and at least one Feature Film Box.

Core Box contains:

- Action Cards: Deck of cards available to the player each turn.
- Dice: Red dice used to resolve action checks and determine outcomes.
- Victim Tokens: Bystander tokens placed on the board to be saved or targeted by the killer.
- Tracking Markers: Components used to track your health, horror level, and time.
- Player & Killer Boards: Central tracking boards for horror, time, action card purchasing, and health.
- Player & Killer Meeples: Tokens used to track character positions on the board.

Feature Film Box contains:

- Location & Killer Boards: Modular board components that can be mixed and matched across different sets.
- Final Girl Cards: Playable heroines, each with unique abilities and stats.
- Killer Cards: Villain cards, detailing their strengths and special abilities.
- Item Cards: Weapons and tools found at the location to aid survival.
- Event Cards: Unpredictable scenarios that modify gameplay rules.

How to play 'Final Girl'?

Select a final girl, a killer, and choose a location. The game board is set up according to the chosen location, with victim tokens and items placed in designated areas. The game unfolds in a series of turns, each consisting of several phases:

1. Action Phase: Take actions using action points. Actions can include moving, searching for items, rescuing victims, and attacking the killer. The success of these actions is determined by rolling dice.
2. Planning Phase: Plan your strategy and decide which actions cards you want to buy with time.
3. Killer Phase: Draw a terror card, which triggers an event that affects the game. During this phase, the killer moves and attacks according to the instructions on their action cards.
4. Panic Phase: If victims are in the space with the killer, roll dice to determine if they panic and move to a different location, potentially putting themselves in more danger.
5. Upkeep Phase: Resolve any ongoing effects or adjust the board as necessary.
